Gross: "This is a 920 gram, 21.0 x 11.0 x 9.0 cm kidney. Near the hilum there is a 3.0 x 1.5 cm patency expressing brown-tan and white-tan purulent debris. Arising from the cortex is a 10.0 x 8.0 x 4.0 cm mass with a central cavity containing necrotic debris. The mass extends to the inferior retroperitoneal margin. The dissection of the hilar vessels and ureter is unremarkable. The mass does not involve the pelvis. There is a 4.5 x 3.0 x 0.5 cm adrenal gland which is grossly uninvolved."

Case 9 MS96_172, Donation: Dr. Kevin Thompson, LLUMC

A 15 year old girl with a 1 month history of fever, a 1 week history of diarrhea and 3 days history of vomiting presented with profuse bleeding from her rectum. She was given fluids, antibiotics and transfusions and taken to surgery where an obvious inflammatory process was identified at the terminal ileum. An "inflammatory band" connected it to the omentum. The lumen was filled with blood and there were enlarged regional lymph nodes.

Pathologic examination of the ileo-colic resection specimen showed multiple ileal ulcers up to 5 cm in diameter. They were associated with necrotic yellow-tan exudate. Cultured material grew gram negative bacilli with growth on MacConkey agar and no gas but small H<sub>2</sub>S+ with a TSI agar slant.
